

beneath the waves

Kóíá Túbòsún
April 21, 2021

I am not terrified
of the dark. I do not know if the arms of God
would hold me
like poetry has done
every time my floater resurfaces
as I spiral beneath the waves.

When I break, does God break too?
Why must I do all the breaking alone?
Look at all the healing
this body has had to betray breaking itself over and over.

---

Iyanuoluwa Adenle is a poet and essayist from Nigeria. Her works have appeared or are forthcoming in Kalahari Review, African Writer, Empty Mirror, Onejacar, Lolwe, Kissing Dynamite and elsewhere.